Growth Of Florida Industry Means Increased Labor Needs For Glades

Florida gained more than 400 new industrial plants during 1956, Executive Director B. B. Fuller, Jr., of the state development commission reported this week.

Lee L. Smith, manager of the Florida State Employment Service here, said the Glades and particularly Belle Glade stands to gain at least two of the new industries coming into the county this year.

The county gained 14 new industries last year; however, construction in each case will take a number of months and it may be the middle of next year before the level of employment reaches its peak. Smith said it is not anticipated that their manpower needs will be much above 200 or 300 persons.

"The local Employment Service office stands ready to assist in the recruitment of skilled workers to fill the manpower needs," Smith said.

"Some workers having the necessary skills will be drawn from our local areas and getting replacements for them will be a major job for the FSES." The local office is now making plans to recruit personnel from smaller cities not affected by this great expansion of industry in the state.

The state development commission's report also listed 33 major expansions during the year.

"We believe the total of 441 new plans and major expansions is the highest figure for any southern state and one of the highest in the nation," director Fuller stated.

The most significant point in the report is that these new establishments can be expected to supply a minimum of 33,000 new jobs, a peacetime record for a single year in Florida.

Fuller said the largest manufacturing plants announced in 1956 were the Glenn L. Martin guided missiles and electronic components plant south of Orlando, the Pratt and Whitney jet aircraft development and testing plant west of West Palm Beach, and the Kraft Foods citrus concentrate plant at Lakeland.

Each of these three will employ a minimum of 2,000 workers, Fuller declared. He went on to say that Florida's industrial prospects for the future are bright, especially since chances are good that natural gas will be made available to the peninsula by the middle of 1958.

Legionnaire Is Given Special Honorary Post

As definite proof that the members of Everglades Post 20 of the American Legion here are a civic-minded group of fastidious individuals, filled with pride of the city in which they live, the legionnaires named one of their members to an honorary post in the organization.

With special instructions to use the position to its fullest extent, to assist the city wherever possible, J. B. Jones, former commander, finance officer, and all-around outstanding citizen, was named Legion dog catcher.

The vote was unanimous following nomination by N. B. Willis, former city dog catcher, who vowed to aid Jones with technical advice and cooperation. The position is a highly controversial one.

Willis then rose to announce his candidacy for the same post

Custard Apple Days

By LAWRENCE E. (Okeelanta) WILL

Editor's Note: Lawrence E. (Okeelanta) Will, was among the first citizens of the Glades back in 1915, was the first and only Fire Chief of Belle Glade.

His experience in the Glades includes service on boats, tug and dredges on the lake and on most of the main canals leading from the lake.

Lawrence's father, the late Dr. L. Will, became enamored of the muck soil and induced numerous friends and associates in the Bureau of Forestry in Washington to buy land. Dr. Will's last days were busy fighting for the roads and water control which experience taught him was necessary.

Lawrence's experiences and association with his father coupled with a sense of humor, give his ready typewriter source of facts and stories about the early days of our community.

We believe everyone will be interested in reading these stories and that the high school students may find them valuable in acquiring a background of community.

By special arrangement we are presenting this series of articles by Mr. Will and commend them to you.

It is planned to print these articles in pamphlet form and to make them available to the public.

Last Train To Clewiston

You are mighty right, Mack, when you say it takes a long time to get anywhere, what with highway congestion, traffic lights and slow zones. I guess it is natural to be impatient to get where you are going. It was that way back in the days when all transportation was by boat. It seemed that no matter what kind of boat you were in, whether a farmer's launch, a fisherman's run boat or a scheduled passenger boat, they all ran at about the uniform speed of five or six miles an hour. Of course, if you asked, the owner would generally brag that his boat could do seven in the canal and eight in the lake. Francis Cross ran a speedboat for Flory Conners that could roar across the lake at 40 miles per hour, but aside from that six miles was about standard. When the railroads arrived at the lake we thought we would be able to get places in a hurry. What a disappointment my first train ride turned out to be. I could have made better time on a freight boat.

This happened just before Christmas in 1924. Captain Hann Holloway was constructing the first lake shore levee and the dredge was making a deep waterway. The dredge had gotten permission from Cap to take a few days off and visit civilization. The launch took to the city dock which adjoined the canal locks at the old flat top cypress, and from there we walked to the Atlantic Coast Railway station. The train consisted of a small locomotive and two diminutive cars, the first car for express and the second a combination mail and passenger coach. The train pulled out of the station, and I had gotten on and had hardly got out of town before its speed slowed to a brisk walk. The Glades had been suffering from one of its perennial floods, and even at this late season the whole landscape was covered with water to a depth of a foot or more. The grade on which the tracks was laid had been made by dumping sand on top of the natural muck surface. Now both the sand grade and the underlying muck base had been waterlogged. Near the lake a few holes and the roadbed was spongy as a mattress. The train proceeded at snail's pace, rolling and rocking. After a few miles it stopped altogether. Peering curiously from the rear steps of the coach, we observed a work crew of men busily shoveling and tamping wet sand under the ties. We proceeded only to be stopped several more times for similar track crews.

As it was evident that it would be a considerable time before we should reach our destination, it seemed that a good way to improve the time would be to strike up an acquaintanceship with our fellow passengers. As they were few, it did not take long. One was a farmer with two small children. The other was a commercial fisherman. The former was quite reserved, apparently unwilling to become familiar with two such rough looking characters as I and The Fisherman. The latter was interested only in a bottle which he surreptitiously sampled when he thought he was unnoticed — the cheap bum! We were sure he did not belong in the Glades.

Despite the sluggish rate at which the train was moving it was almost impossible to walk down the aisle. The car rolled like a round bottomed boat in a sea way. I once wished to visit the water cooler on the front bulkhead it was necessary to lunge from seat to seat timing each step with the unpredictable lurch of the car. It was rather exciting, the more so in view of the fact that we momentarily expected any of these lurches to roll us right off the track and into the ditch.

Turning for the moment from our uncommunicative fellow travelers, we considered the scenery. It was hardly inspiring. Nothing was to be seen but vacant prairie, unrelieved by house or tree. Here and there a row of weeds dejectedly drooping above the water indicated the presence of a ditch bank. All the rest was scattered, broken up by a few small trees and shrubs. After hours of creeping progress the track swung north and eventually we sighted Clewiston, terminus of the railroad, which, although hardly big enough to be classed as a town, at least showed indications of being a settlement. Near the lake a few houses and stores flanked the track which ended at a large dock projecting into the lake. At the edge of the dock was the only building of consequence, a two story Watanabe Hotel, which was run by a Japanese family of that name, the first Japs to live on the lake. The ground floor of this hotel may have seemed like a little crowded, since it sheltered the railway station, the telegraph office, post office and a general store.

Here we waited for the mail boat to Canal Point and checked on our time. We had made the fifteen miles from Moore Haven, moving nearly all the time, in exactly three hours, an average of five miles per hour. A freight boat might have been quicker.

And this was for the time, the last train to Clewiston. Schedules for the next few weeks were made by railway motor car.

"A Crackin' Good Florida Cracker"

RALPH MAROTTA'S method of exploding acetylene gas, in the contraption to the left, is good news to scientists and bad news to blackbirds in corn, coons in watermelons and other predators, two and four legged. The instrument gives off a bright flashing light at night and makes a disconcerting noise. It's being used to disturb the stop-over feeding of migratory geese in Kentucky on their trips to and from Canada. It's inexpensive, noisy, flashy and effective.

Anita Adkinson

Marion Brewster

Say Wedding Vows

Anita Marie Adkinson became the bride of Marion Brewster in a charming and simple ceremony Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Woody Resmondo, 341 S. E. Ave. E.

Miss Adkinson, who has been making her home here for the past four years, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Adkinson of Miami. Mr. Brewster, Belle Glade, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Brewster of War, West Virginia.

The Rev. H. E. Garrett, pastor of the Community Methodist Church performed the double-ring ceremony. Arrangements of white and pink gladioli and white lilies and pink roses were used about the room.

Given in marriage by her brother, Clarence Adkinson, the bride wore a dress of white nylon net over taffeta with a white lace jacket. Her veil of white nylon was attached to a crown of white rosebuds and she carried a white Bible topped with tuberoses centered with white orchid.

Mrs. Eloise Adkinson was the bride's only attendant. She wore a blue nylon dress over blue taffeta and her corsage was of pink rosebuds. Hershel Brewster was best man for his brother.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Adkinson chose a light blue silk dress with a white corsage.

Immediately after the ceremony the reception was held. Assisting in serving the three-tier wedding cake decorated with a lily of the valley and white wedding bells, and punch were Mrs. Jeannette Resmondo, Mrs. Jerry Resmondo, Mrs. Mildred Resmondo and Mrs. Eloise Brooks.

After a wedding trip to Miami, the couple will be at home in Belle Glade.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Adkinson and family and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Richardson of Miami and Mr. and Mrs. Noah Resmondo of West Palm Beach.

Leaving from New Orleans on the Lykes Brothers Steamship Line, Mrs. Williamson will make her first landing at Cape-town, Africa, where she plans on an extensive trip into the interior. Leaving there other ports to be visited will be Australia, Zealand, Singapore, and Japan, before her return which will be about six months.

Mrs. Edwina C. Young, executive secretary of the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce received a short note this week from Rube Allyn, publisher of "Rube Allyn's Authentic Fishing Map" of St. Petersburg.

City Team Changes Mind
Will Enter League Now

Increased interest in a local baseball club was named for the reason that officials of last year's Coast-Glades baseball club have changed their minds and decided to field a team.

Last week it was reported that a lack of interested persons would force the local players on the inactive list this year. This week it was learned that at least 15 members have shown a great interest and that Coast-Glades officials in Melbourne were notified that Belle Glade will enter the league this year.

There will be another meeting tonight at the American Legion hall at 8 p. m. according to manager, Perry Rignold.

Rignold said that members of the Canal Point A-1s force unit have been asked to play with the local team. Any other businessmen or civilians wanting to play with the team are asked to call Rignold at The Herald.

Rams Trim League
Leading Trojans

By Jack McCaskill
The Belle Glade Rams turned in a perfect fielding performance behind the one hit pitching of Dan Jones and in so doing handed Lake Worth its first Suncoast Conference loss of the season.

Jones pitched a near perfect game holding the Trojans hitless for five innings and issuing only three bases on balls. Using a sharp-breaking curve and a fast ball, he was in complete control until the bottom of the sixth, when Lake Worth managed a scratch single which barely got by third baseman Jimmy Webster. Eleven Trojans went down by striking out.

Jimmy Webster, newly installed third baseman, handled five chances perfectly. The remainder of the infield, composed of Challancin, Lutz and Thomas played heads up, errorless ball.

Earl Armstrong, the Ram's leadoff batter, greeted pitcher Pagan with a rousing double on the first pitch. In the fourth Crant went all the way from first base to home on a sacrifice bunt by Ken Norris for the second and last run of the game. Belle Glade has won three games and lost five. Their next home game will be with Clewiston Tuesday, April 23.

KILGORE SEED CO
veloped by Associated Seed Growers, Inc. for which Kilgore is a retailer. The tests were conducted on muck and sandland soils in exhaustive tests which proved Sixtypak was superior to the next highest yielding hybrid.

In the 74 days from planting to harvest this new variety has shown as high as 100 crates to the acre more than its nearest competitor.

At the same time, this blight-resistant hybrid costs between $35-40 less per acre for sprays. This special blight-resistant factor accounts for a large portion of the increased yield.

Seed corn of the Sixtypak is limited, Barry said. Orders are now being taken for next season's planting and Barry stated that potential users of the new variety should get their orders in early.

The Sixtypak plants grow to a uniform average of 6½ feet tall with heavy dark foliage; a high percentage having two fancy ears per stalk. Ears average 7½ to 8 inches long, well-filled to the tip, averaging 14 rows of yellow kernels.

The tests were completed at farms near Fort Myers, Pompano, West Palm Beach and Belle Glade in both fall and spring crops.

The term Sixtypak was derived from the fact that five dozen ears fill a crate.
